OUR REGULAR SOLDIERS.

At Least Eighty Per Cent of Our Army Said to Be American Born.

In examining the lists of soldiers killed and wounded before Santiago one is struck by the great proportion of what may be termed distinctively American names which appear. It has been a common belief that the majority of our regular soldiers were foreigners, and the hasty deduction was made that they were of the floating population, fighting simply for their pay and distinctly inferior mentally, morally and physically. In one list of 170 wounded 130 bore American names—fully 76 per cent—and we think it justifiable to claim that fully one-half of those having Irish names were born in the United States.

Consequently, if this list is a type of all, at least 80 per cent of our army must be American born. This is very gratifying to know. All reports from correspondents and disinterested people unite in praising the fine physique, general intelligence and good conduct of our enlisted men. Of their conduct in battle the losses they sustained at Santiago is the best proof, and it is gratifying to our pride to now know that they are practically all Americans.—Army and Navy Journal.

Police Court Notes.

In the Police Court this forenoon, three Chinamen arrested by Deputy Marshal Chillingworth, were found guilty of running a paka pio establishment and fined $50 and cost each.

Ah Yau, charged with assault and battery on Mrs. Santos and Yong Ing for the same offense on Mrs. Kaboolubi, were found guilty and fined $6 and costs. Attorney for the defense, Charles Clark, noted and appeal.

It appears that the two women mentioned were assaulted while on the fishing rights of the Chinamen outside of Iwilei. They had bags filled with squid, sea weed and eggs. The Chinamen tried to get these away from the women and, being met with resistance, struck them.

JUDGE WIDEMANN IS DEAD.

Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

This office he held until February 18, 1874, when he resigned along with First Associate Justice A. S. Hartwell—both to enter the Cabinet of King Kalakaua, the subject of this sketch as Minister of the Interior. Mr. Widemann was a member of the Privy Council of State, also of the Board of Health. When the House of Nobles was appointed by the sovereign, Mr. Widemann was a member. At the first general election after the promulgation of the Constitution of 1887, which made the Nobles elective under a high property qualification, he was elected to the same House, where he retained his seat until chosen by Queen Liliuokalani in her first Cabinet as Minister of Finance.

The last appearance in public life of Judge Widemann was to take charge of the forlorn hope of Queen Liliuokalani for obtaining recognition of her claim to be restored to the throne of Hawaii, at the United States, British, German and other capitals.

As a jurist, although without preliminary training in the law, Mr. Widemann made a record for sound common sense and unimpeachable integrity. In political life, whether as a statesman, an executive officer, or a legislator, he was discreet, upright and conservative.

Mr. Widemann has borne an eminent part in developing the industry and promoting the commerce of the Hawaiian Islands. Among the sugar planters he has for many years been among the most successful. His first agricultural venture in the islands was coffee raising on Kauai, where he resided from his coming here to stay until 1864. This was not remunerative and he gave up coffee for sugar cane planting. He started the Lihue plantation on Kauai in 1850, that being the first sugar enterprise in the Islands conducted according to modern methods.

When the reciprocity treaty with the United States was concluded in 1876, Mr. Widemann regarded the instrument with great displeasure. It was in his opinion a compact that was derogatory to the dignity of the Hawaiian people. He considered that there had been enough profit in sugar production without the treaty, and that the interests of the Hawaiian Islands were sacrificed to procure the new advantages. So intensely he felt on the subject that he sold out all his planting interests and retired from active life. Inactivity, however, being foreign to his temperament, Mr. Widemann in 1878 started the Waianae plantation on Oahu. This estate he brought to a highly profitable condition, and personally held most of its corporate stock until near his death.

Mr. Widemann was interested in other local enterprises besides those named. The chief promoter of the Mutual Telephone Co., he owned the controlling interest in its shares until after the absorption of the Bell Telephone Co. a few years ago. He is a large owner of real estate in Honolulu and leaves great wealth. One of the most attractive corners of the capital city is the large demeane at Beretania and Punahou streets, containing stately mansions inhabited by his own and the families of his married children.

Hermann A. Widemann on May 5, 1850, married Mary Kauai, a Hawaiian lady, who survives him, so that the couple would have celebrated their golden wedding in a little more than a year hence had not death broken the bond that has so long been affectionately and religiously held sacred. To Mr. and Mrs. Widemann have been born seven daughters and two sons: Mrs. H. B. Macfarlane, Mrs. Fred W. Macfarlane, Mrs. C. O. Berger, for some years now a widow, Mrs. Wm. Lanz, Mrs. John M. Dowsett, Mrs. O. Conrad, Miss Unna Widemann, and Messrs. Carl and Hermann Widemann. Carl is manager of the coffee plantation on the Waianae sugar estate, and Hermann holds a position in the office of J. D. Spreckels & Bros. Co. in San Francisco. With these children and his wife, Judge Widemann leaves many grandchildren.
